SARDAR VALLABHBHAI PATEL

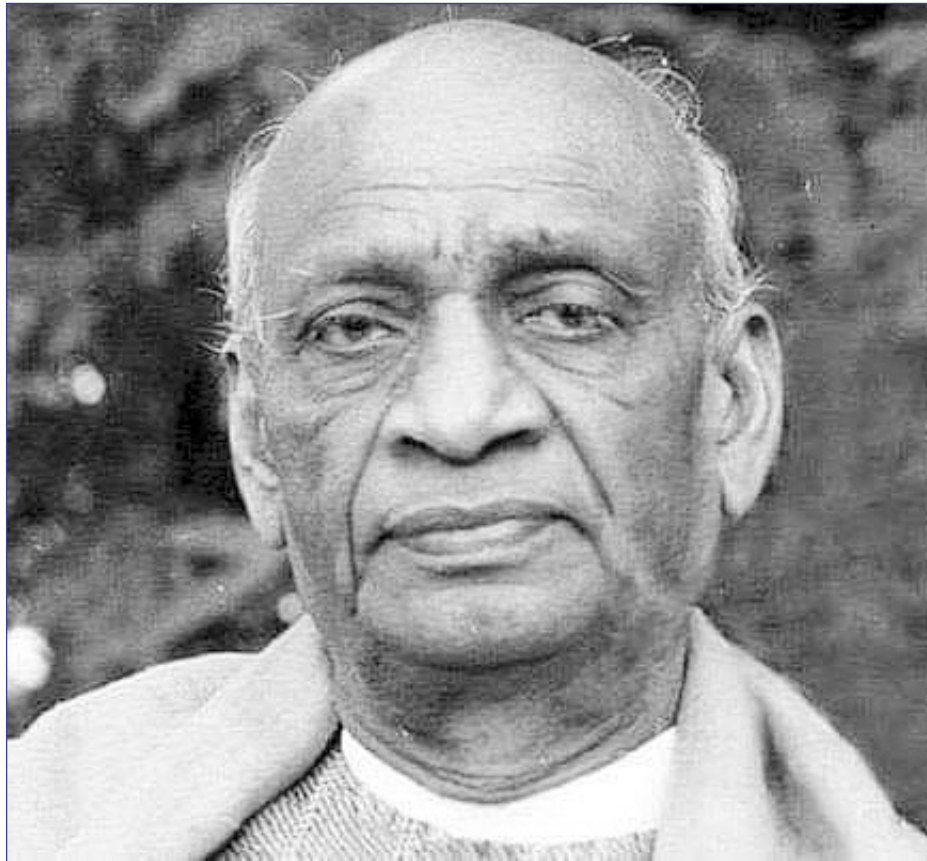

THE ARCHITECT OF MODERN INDIA

Swadesh Singh

It was the long cherished dream of Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi to build a statue of Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel in Gujarat. Known as the Statue of Unity, the project has been completed now and is the tallest statue in the world with a height of 182 meters. Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi is scheduled to inaugurate the statue on October 31 - the birthday of this giant of Indian politics also known as the Iron Man.

In 2014, the government started celebrating 31 October, as Rashtriya Ekta Diwas (National Unity Day). The official statement of the Home Ministry says, "This Day will provide an opportunity to re-affirm the inherent strength and resilience of our nation to withstand the actual and potential threats to the unity, integrity and security of our country."

These two initiatives of the government signify the importance of Sardar Patel in unifying India which stood broken into many parts at the time of Independence in the wake of the 'Divide and Rule' policy of the colonial rulers. Many believed that a united India could no longer be forged out of the pieces and the newly independent nation was bound to crumble. It was Patel who took up the mantle and pieced together a united India.

The Unifier

Modern India, as a sum of inalienable parts, is the biggest legacy of Sardar Patel. As the Home Minister he worked tirelessly to unite the country by bringing within the national fold the princely states that were spread across the length and breadth of the country. All the princely states merged with India on the call given by Sardar Patel except three - Jammu and Kashmir, Junagadh and Hyderabad. Nehru himself looked

CAREERS IN COMMERCE

Dr. Sheetal Kapoor

Commerce as a stream of education can be defined as a study of trade and business activities such as the exchange of goods and services from producer to final consumer. Commerce, an evergreen stream offers huge opportunities to students to make up their careers after Class XII. With the rapid opening of our markets to foreign companies, rising GDP and a number of reforms carried by the Indian government, the students of Commerce can expect huge job opportunities in this area. Growing service sector offers enormous job opportunities in accounting, banking, insurance, advertising, mass communication, Public Relations, stock markets, tourism, retailing, business law, international business, marketing research, taxation, teaching, etc.

The increasing number of career choices creates a situation of dissonance in the minds of the students and therefore clarity about what they should do after Class XII is very much required. Students who have opted for Commerce stream during Class XII are now familiar with subjects such as, Accountancy, Business Studies, Economics and Mathematics.

Admission in Delhi University

Delhi University offers admission based on merit in B. Com. Hons. and B.Com. courses for Commerce students. Amongst them B.Com. Hons. is one of the most popular course which enables and equips the students to acquire conceptual knowledge about the various business concepts and practices and enables them to apply various tools to face up the challenges as business managers. It offers lucrative career opportunities in the field of management, banking, insurance, marketing, accounting, advertising, finance, taxation. The curriculum has been designed to prepare students for the corporate sector and many papers such as computers, Tally, E-Filing, Consumer Affairs and Customer care, Advertising, E Marketing, E-Commerce have application part in them. To get admission in a regular college in Delhi University, students can opt for B.Com. (Hons) or B.Com. (Prog). For studying B.Com. while calculating aggregate marks Maths is not compulsory. Thus, those aspirants who did not opt for Maths during Class XII can take up B.Com. course as it is required that the applicant should have studied and passed Mathematics/ Business Mathematics as the qualifying examination for admission to B. Com. (Hons.). If a student is from Science or humanities and wants to pursue B.Com. Hons. or B.Com. a deduction in percentage is done. For this the student can refer to the Bulletin as released by the Delhi University and available on its website www.du.ac.in. Procedure for calculation of Best Four subject's percentage for B. Com. (Honours)/B.Com. in DU

In this one Language ie English/ Hindi + three best subjects which include Accountancy, Business Studies, Economics and Mathematics are considered.

MY ASPIRATIONS FOR NEW AGE INDIA

Lovey Choudhary

India's democracy, the world's most populous, is a marvel of the modern age: 1.3 billion people that communicate more than 700 languages beneath one roof. Almost 1/6th of mankind lives in India.

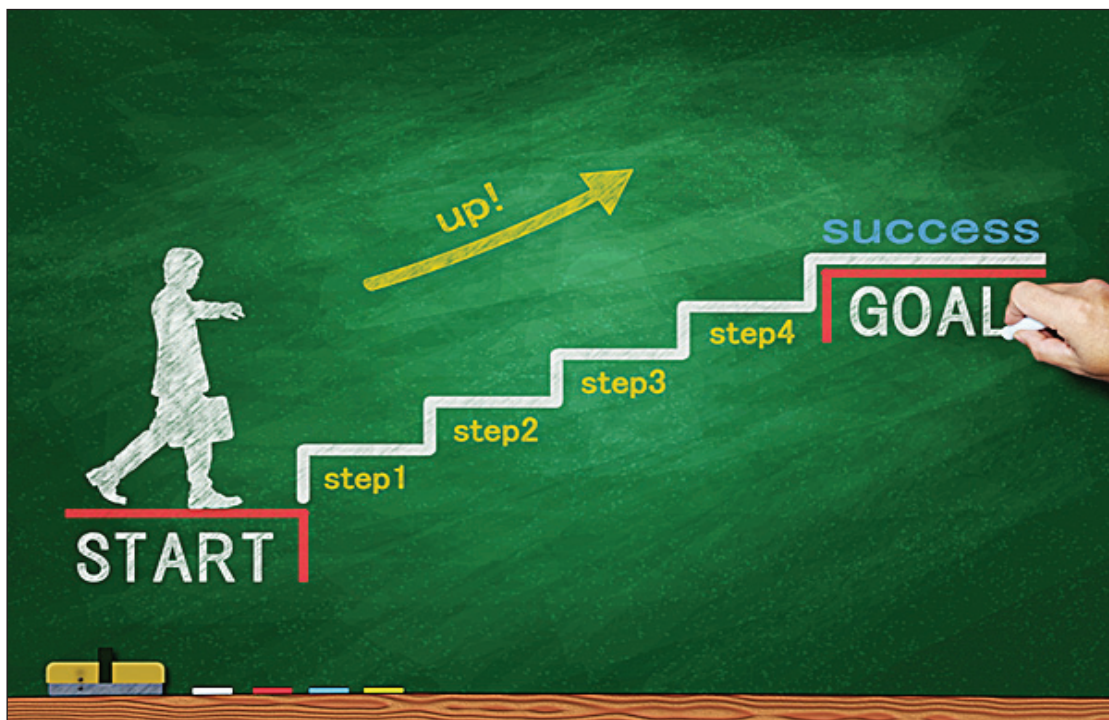

At first glance, I am on a quest to make India better. On a more profound level, it is only a fantasy. It mirrors an irrepressible desire, to see India, Indians and the Indian economy at the top of the global ladder. I am certain that many of you share the same dream.

Poor public services, high inflation, crippling corruption and crumbling infrastructure are constant grievances of masses. Indians yearn for better education, more jobs, zero poverty, improved healthcare and faster development as a path to prosperity.

India falls under the third world country tag which is an issue of great concern, due to the fact a country which produces high number employment across the world and is one of the quickest growing economies within the global arena is disadvantaged of all of the fundamental human requirements.

I think India is one of the greatest countries with the massive ability to overgrow any country in the world. Today, more than half of India's population is under the age of 25. By 2020, India's average age will be just 29 years, compared to 37 in China and the United States, 45 in Western Europe and 48 in Japan. This is a generation with huge potential and big aspirations. India is self-sufficient in topography, natural resources, manpower.

The children of today will become founding fathers of tomorrow, who are being nurtured into the wombs of formal and informal corporations of education. We need to put our future at the front of our minds and in our policy-planning, because, when they thrive, India will too.

India is by all accounts growing rapidly in the diverse field. However, the following are primary field zones that will make India a developed country.

Agriculture

It will remain the mainstay of employment with over 40% in India of my dreams. Farming is the backbone of India. 75% of India is agrarian land. Highest priority should be given to agribusiness and farmers to make India a developed nation. Keeping up with agribusiness will help in keeping up our spine strong.

Green revolution

India should be a Green India. We don't want to see only advanced structures and zero trees. Fewer trees would lead to contamination, no rain and individuals will wind up with misery from obscure illnesses. Each individual should assume up the liability of having a tree for every house, at any rate, to make India a Green India.

Literacy rate

The Indian literacy rate stands at 74% (2011 Census figure) with recent reports of 80% literacy. Ideally, the literacy rate should be 100% after almost 71 years of independence. The understanding of every part of what we do can be achieved only through education. And this education should be good enough to make result effective. Literacy will rise significantly to over 80% in the future, but that will still leave about one in five adults illiterate.

Gender Equality

Indian women have come halfway to gender equality and have rather strange aspirations as to their gender's performance, which only reinforces gender norms and hierarchy. And that explains why they have stunted career goals and easily give up professional life for the sake of home.

Women should no longer be bound by gender norms. They must be secured so they can bravely and confidently step out of the confines of four walls and enter their own world.

Women can be raised like sons but can sons be raised like daughters? But men are not taking the traditional roles played by women, are they?

Immediate action for crime

In order to avoid major crime, the penalty for each crime should be severe and immediate, and no option should be given as an alternative for the judgment finalized. Every individual who committed the crime must undergo the severe punishments, which will disallow any other person in the country to commit the same crime. Every day in the paper we read at least an average of 4 incidents of rape. Any kind of eve teasing should also have severe punishments to avoid any sexual harassment.

Corruption

There are instances of scams running into crores of rupees.

People forget as the year passes, the reason being there are no judgments given for such, which enables people to repeat. There ought to be prompt judgment and serious measures for the debasement, which should dispirit people to get into corruption.

Decentralization of power

The local village or panchayat or colony or ward knows which the best decision for them is, in terms of electricity/ roads/ farming/dams. They should be given a fair right to make that decision. Centralizing it is like trying to "fit one size for all". Also, it will reduce the corruption as funds are not centralized in one place.

Proper/Neat and Fair Transportation

Roughly speaking the country has great transportation, however, the remaining public transport vehicles are not in a decent condition, the transport/ railroad stations are not slick, and transports are dependably swarmed. Keeping in mind the enetual goal to make India a developed nation the transportation framework ought to be proper, neat and fair.

People with a Civic Sense

There are spit marks, random garbage and overflowing sewers at each nook and corner of India. It is anything but difficult to stick everything on the administration; however, people should take it on themselves and their own particular community sense. Streets are not filthy because no one cleaned it, but rather because someone dirtied it in the first place. Civic sense is nothing but social ethics.

Clean and Neat Rivers/Water Bodies

Every corner of our major river/water body is choked with waste items, having a wicked smell when you cross it. My aspirations for new India fairly include clean and neat water bodies in India. Responsibility lies with every citizen and the government. Do not throw garbage in the water bodies, it is not a dustbin.

Effective and affordable Public Health Care

Public Healthcare is not as effective as private health care. Moreover, the private healthcare is not affordable for every being in India. The government should take broad measures of having successful and reasonable health care services which are open to all regardless of religion, gender and caste.

Proper implementation of Government plans

Government is launching various plans to make India a developed nation but mostly the results are not what we expected. This is because the execution of such plans is not viable. If the plans proposed are executed effectively, it will not be long for us mature into a developed nation.

India of my dreams will touch nearly $8 trillion Gross domestic product (GDP), almost four times the current level, and the addition to the GDP in the decade will be nearly thrice the amount added in the almost 71 years since Independence. With population growth slowing down, this will also mean per capita incomes rise about four-fold to $6,000.

India's integration with the global economy will be even higher with trade in goods and services accounting for nearly two-thirds of GDP. The average Indian will consume over four times the power he does today.

Internet users will account for anywhere between 50% and 80% of the populace. The market for passenger cars will be around 7.2 million a year, currently the size of the US market. Over 320 million people will travel by air within the country each year, meaning nearly a million Indians will take to the skies each day.

Empowerment in the real world requires political, social and economic change which a class and caste-ridden traditionalist society will not voluntarily offer. In grossly unequal societies, there is necessarily a conflict between those who are systematically denied equal opportunities and the dominant elite which concentrates power in itself.

If we as Indians want to have a better future of India, we have no choice but to change. If you can dream it, you can achieve it.

after the affairs of J&K but Junagadh and Hyderabad were integrated into India with Sardar Patel's intervention. For completing this Herculean task in a charged environment, Patel was considered as 'Bismarck of India'.

Patel worked to forge a united India out of the many pieces left by the British. These comprised the colonial provinces that had been allocated to India and approximately 565 self-governing princely states had been released. With tact and tenacity, Patel persuaded almost every princely state to accede to India. It earned him the title of "Iron Man of India" as he was able to accomplish what many saw at the time as impossible.

With the mammoth task of integrating princely states at hand, Patel sought the help of VP Menon, a senior civil servant with whom he had worked on the Partition of India. Menon became his right-hand man as chief secretary of the States Ministry. It was on 6 May 1947 that Patel began concerted efforts to bring round the princes. This was the time when political ambiguity had sown seeds of distrust and led to clamour among the princely states for autonomy. At this point he lobbied with the princes and brought them to the discussion table. He used all tools of diplomacy and politics, meeting royals in unofficial settings and reaching out to them to convince them that their future was safe in united Independent India. On one hand he proposed favourable terms of merger and allowances like privy purses, while on the other he also appealed to the innate allegiance of the royals to India. By the deadline of 15 August 1947, all except three had signed the instrument of accession document willingly merging into the Indian union.

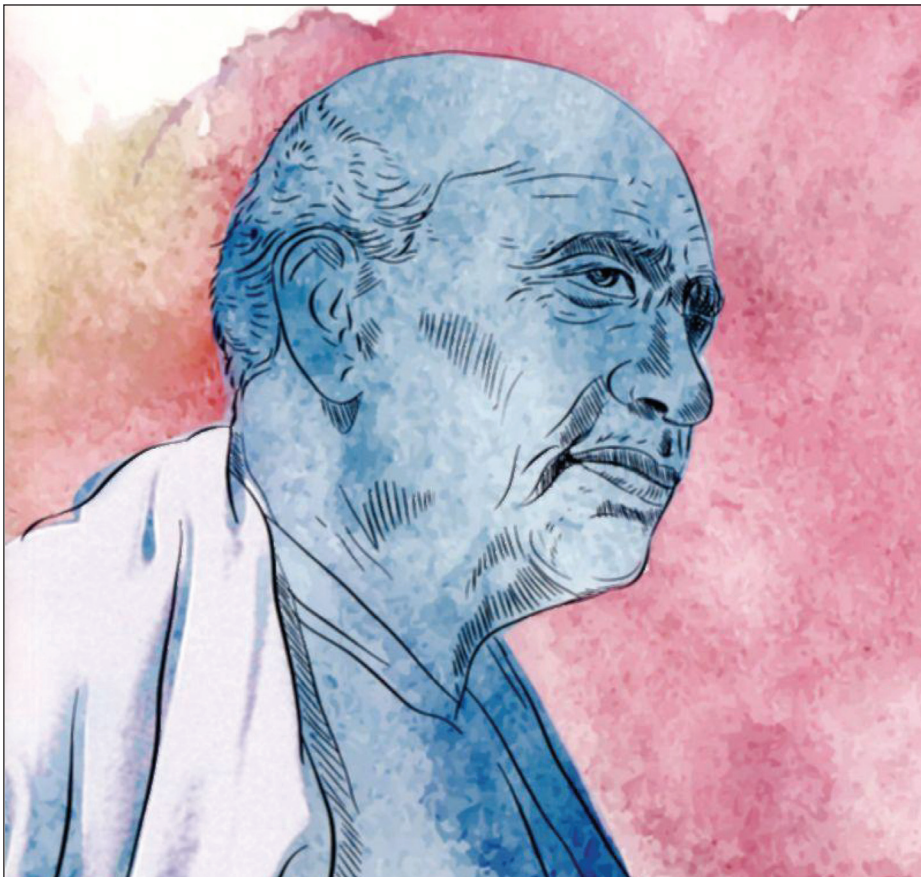

An Organiser

Sardar Patel was an able organiser and administrator. He studied law from England and was a well known advocate before entering public life. He entered politics at the grassroots and organised the peasants of Kathiawar in Gujarat. He held successful peasant movements in Kheda, Borsad and Bardoli. These were important as they helped Congress to break out of the image of being a party for the middle class. It sent the message that Congress also represented the interests of farmers.

The Kheda Satyagraha, in which Mahatma Gandhi also participated, began with a village-by-village tour to document grievances of the villagers. Patel undertook this difficult task supported by Congress volunteers. They sought the support of the villagers for a statewide revolt by refusing to pay taxes and received enthusiastic response from virtually every village. As the government cracked the whip on the revolt, seizing property and confiscating animals, Patel organised counter-action. He used a group of volunteers to help villagers hide their valuables and protect themselves against raids. After widespread arrests, the government agreed to negotiate with Patel. The payment of taxes was suspended for a year and the rate was scaling back.

The Gujarati community began to look upon Patel as a hero. In 1920 he was elected as the president of the newly formed Gujarat Pradesh Congress Committee and served as its president until 1945. He went on to become the president of Congress at its 1931 session in Karachi. Under his presidentship the Congress ratified the Gandhi-Irvin pact and committed itself to standing up for fundamental rights and civil liberties. It advocated the establishment of a secular nation with a minimum wage and the abolition of untouchability and serfdom. Patel used his position as Congress president to organise the return of confiscated land to farmers in Gujarat.

Patel was also seen as the lead fundraiser of the Congress party. Whenever Gandhi was about to start a movement, he directed Patel to mobilise funds for party activities.

Patel's engagement as a key fundraiser for the party and its ace election manager began from 1934 when the party changed its stand on electoral boycott. From his Mumbai-based apartment he toiled to raise funds for the party's political activities in 1934 elections to the Central Legislative Assembly in New Delhi and for provincial elections of 1936. As the chairman of the Congress's Central Parliamentary Board, he also played the lead role in selecting candidates and determining the party's stance on a galaxy of issues.

As Administrator

His first step into electoral politics came with being elected the municipal councillor. He later also became the chairman of the Ahmedabad Municipal Corporation. His administrative abilities were at display during this time when he managed the municipal affairs meticulously focusing on sanitation, electrification and education. His experience in managing the municipal affairs came handy when he took over as the first home minister of the country.

Patel also established the modern all-India services system. For this he is remembered as the "patron saint of India's civil servants".

As Home Minister

It is often pointed out that Patel's appointment as the home minister came only after hectic bargaining by Nehru for the post of Prime Minister. Patel was the first and far more popular claimant of the job.

As per the records, Nehru lobbied during the 1946 election for Congress presidency. The nominations for the post were to be made by 15 state/regional Congress committees. None of the Congress Committees took the lead in organising relief and emergency supplies, establishing refugee camps, and visiting the border areas with Pakistani leaders to encourage peace. He continued this work as the first home minister and deputy prime minister of India and ensured that the refugees were assimilated into the new born country.

In Constituent Assembly

Patel made several significant contributions to the Constituent Assembly as the chairman of the committees responsible for minorities, tribal and excluded areas, fundamental rights, and provincial constitutions. He worked with Muslim leaders to end demand for separate electorates and reservation of seats. He was responsible for the measure that allows the president to appoint Anglo-Indians to Parliament. He was also responsible for putting in place safeguards for civil servants from political involvement.

Conclusion

Over the years, with Nehru tightening his grip on Congress, his legacy far outlived that of Patel. Though, Gandhi had famously remarked that a free India needed both Patel and Nehru. Patel was fiercely loyal to Gandhi as well as a nationalist who kept the country's interest before personal ambition. It is because of these factors that he allowed Nehru to take on Prime Ministership and even offered to quit when the things between them came to a head in 1948. However, he stayed in the government at the behest of Gandhi and was the last person to have had a private talk with him.

Patel considered the demolition of Somnath Temple as a symbol of slavery and pledged the reconstruction of the ancient but dilapidated Somnath Temple in Gujarat. After Independence, he oversaw the restoration work and the creation of a public trust, and vowed to dedicate the temple upon the completion of work. The work was completed after his death and the temple was inaugurated by the first President of India, Dr Rajendra Prasad.

In the contemporary India he has come to symbolize political acumen, ability to take difficult decisions and importance of the idea of nation. He was posthumously conferred the highest civilian honour of the nation, Bharat Ratna, in 1991.

Sardar Patel died on December 15, 1950. His immense contribution to building a united India will always be remembered and his grand statue will serve as a testimony to his vision of a unified India.

proposed Nehru's name despite the fact that he had Gandhi's backing. As many as 12 out of the 15 committees put forward Patel's name and the move was overwhelmingly in his favour. However, Gandhi intervened for Nehru and put Acharya J B Kriplani on the task of getting some members from the Congress Working Committee (CWC) to propose Nehru's name. This was done despite the fact that only Pradesh Congress Committees were authorized to nominate the president. Nehru, however, continued to be defiant. Gandhi thus turned to Patel to break the deadlock and the Iron Man stepped down in favour of Nehru.

Partition

In December 1946 and January 1947, Patel worked with VP Menon on the proposal for a separate dominion of Pakistan created out of Muslim-majority provinces. As Bengal and Punjab broke into communal clashes Patel was convinced that Partition was the only way out. He fiercely resisted Jinnah's demand to club Hindu-majority areas of Punjab and Bengal in a Muslim state and pushed through the partition of those provinces.

In the wake of the wide spread violence and the massive human displacement due to Partition, Patel
