WOMEN EMPOWERMENT IN INDIA

RECENT GOVERNMENT INITIATIVES AND IMPACT

Sakshi Bahuguna

There is a new awareness that even in democracies based on Universal Adult Franchise, every adult citizen has one vote. But, it does not ensure that every citizen is equally empowered. For example, women, minorities, marginalized social group like race or caste. Of all the groups that need empowerment, women is one such category. Empowerment of women is a prerequisite to transform a developing society into a developed one. They are a potential resource for the overall and balanced development. As they constitute 50% of the human race, it is vital that every section of society develops equally and in harmony with each other. Social transformation requires that women should be empowered to make decisions. Hence, special efforts has been made to empower them so that the logic of equality of votes in democracy is fulfilled.

Women's empowerment has become a buzz word in the present context. Empowerment has an instrumental value as well that is why is seen both as a means to an end and an end itself. The idea of empowerment can be talked virtually in any context: human rights, basic needs, economic security, capacity building, skill formations or the conditions of dignified social existence. Irrespective of one's social and economic status, Constitution has created rights for all the members of society. Empowerment is seen as a way of addressing those unenforced rights and gives new emphasis to the building of social and economic capabilities among individuals, classes and communities. Effective policy intervention on part of the state is one of the crucial determinants for women's economic, social and political empowerment. India has a plethora of schemes, policies and programmes for women's empowerment. The state can intervene through intelligent policy intervention and can do something about these existing inequalities. The status of women can only be changed when a multi-sectoral approach is adopted. Thus, building of social capabilities has been the new emphasis of the government. Therefore, there are schemes for capacity building implemented through state.

In the context of women, empowerment is seen as an answer to exploitation, oppression, injustice, through their capacity building or skill development by driving towards literacy and education. Being disempowered means to be denied choices and empowerment is the process that enables the person to make choices, those who have been denied earlier. The empowerment and autonomy of women and the improvement of their political, social, economic and health status is a highly important end in itself. In addition, it is essential for the achievement of sustainable development. The full participation and partnership of both women and men is required in productive and reproductive life, including shared responsibilities for the care and nurturing of children and maintenance of the household.

Recent Government Initiatives:

Improving the status of women advances their decision-making capacity at all levels in all spheres of life. This, in turn, is essential for the long-term success of population programmes. Experience shows that population and development programmes are most effective when steps have simultaneously been taken to improve the status of women.

TRANSLATION AS A CAREER AND ITS SCOPE

Dr. Bharat Singh Negi & Prabha Negi

Translation is an activity that aims at conveying meaning or meanings of a given linguistic discourse from one language to another. Translation can be defined in terms of sameness of meaning across languages. According to some researchers, there can be no absolute correspondence between languages and hence no fully exact translations. Translation at some level is always possible, however, there are times when interlocutors are aware that they do not mean the same by particular phrases. Meaning is formed on each occasion of linguistic interaction and is therefore unique and not replicable. Therefore, a translation can never 'mean' the same as the source text. But this does not matter, because practice ensures that translators 'get away with' translating well sufficiently often. The word 'translate' comes from the Latin 'translation' where 'trans' means across and 'latus' means carrying; the word thus means the carrying across of meaning from one language to the other. The various Indian language words for translation do not convey this meaning. Anuvad (speak after), bhashantar (linguistic transference), tarjuma (reproduction), roopantar (change of form), vivartanam (change), mozhimattam (change of script)- what P. Lal, one of India's well-known translators, has described as 'transcreation'. This is a process whereby the translation, rather than a docile transference of meaning from one linguistic system to the other, becomes a retelling by the translator in another language. So this implies that our basic concept of translation was different, and we need to explore if this is because classical Indian critical theories conceptualized it differently.

Translation is the communication of the meaning of a source language text by means of an equivalent target language text. The English language draws a terminological distinction (not all languages do) between translating (a written text) and interpreting (oral or sign-language communication between users of different languages); under this distinction, translation can begin only after the appearance of writing within a language community. A translator always risks inadvertently introducing source-language words grammar, or syntax into the target-language rendering. On the other hand, such "spill-overs" have sometimes imported useful source-language calques and loanwords that have enriched target languages. Translators, including early translators of sacred texts, have helped shape the very languages into which they have translated.

History of translation in India

India is a multi-lingual country and has always been so. There are actually two distinct language families in India-the Indo-Aryan and the Dravidian. The most ancient of the Dravidian languages is Tamil, the others being Kannada, Telugu and Malayalam which evolved later than Tamil. The major Indian languages of today derive from either of the two groups, and sometimes two Indian languages might not have many linguistic traits in common. For instance, translation from Hindi to Malayalam means that translation is between two languages that are radically different although they belong to the same region called India. But despite this diversity, we can safely state that Indian languages own a shared sensibility, partly derived from the common heritage of Sanskrit and from ancient theories of literature and language.

As India passed into the medieval period, the influence of Sanskrit declined. The various invasions during this period also brought with them different cultural and linguistic influences. Persian became the dominant language because it was the language of the court; it was also considered to be the elite language of scholarship under the Mughal rulers. The Mughal courts had scholars who were also translators. Baburnama, the autobiography of Babur was originally written in a language called Chagatay but was translated into Persian by Humayun's minister Bairam Khan. Akbar commissioned translations of Sanskrit works into Persian. The Mahabharata was translated into Persian during Akbar's time. His great-grandson Dara Shukoh translated the Upanishads and the Bhagavad-gita into Persian.

The influence of Indian critical theory also impacted other aspects of translation. Equivalence as we understand

WOMEN EMPOWERMENT ...

The Government of India has taken measures to promote the fulfilment of girls' and women's potential through education, skills development and the eradication of illiteracy for all girls and women without discrimination of any kind, giving paramount importance to the elimination of poverty and ill health. Government has taken necessary measures to ensure universal access, on the basis of equality between women and men, to appropriate, affordable and quality health care for women throughout their life cycle. National machineries for the advancement of women have been established in almost every member state to, inter alia, design, promote the implementation of, execute, monitor, evaluate, advocate and mobilize support for policies that promote the advancement of women.

Some of the most noteworthy programmes introduced by the Government of India in the last four years have been thoughtfully crafted and covers a lot of ground towards the upliftment of nation where although women are worshipped in every religion, society is keener on getting them married rather than educated. Instead, this plan concentrates on helping families financially for their daughters' education and wedding expenses. In accordance with this saving scheme, parents or guardians can open an exclusive account in the name of their daughter with any bank or post office with a minimum amount. Multiple deposits of any value can then be made every year up to 14 years from date of opening account. The deposit shall mature after 21 years. The deposit made can be claimed as deduction under Sec 80C of Income Tax. Also interest earned, presently 8.4% p.a, is also tax-free.

One Stop Center Scheme (2015)

Women in society are struggling from exploitation, torture and violence which needs to be checked. This violence could be in any form - physical, sexual, mental, economic or psychological abuse. It is the primary responsibility of any nation's government to give its citizens a fair and safe environment to blossom. In line with this goal of upliftment of women, One Stop Centre Scheme was introduced in April 2015. These One Stop Centres (OSC) step up for offering immediate response, women. There are many such schemes that have been introduced and are well-intentioned,

Here is a quick summary of some of the many recent government schemes for women:

- ♦ Beti Bachao, Beti Padhao: meant for uplifting women in the sphere of women's education.
- ♦ Sukanya Samridhi Account: meant to help families' save for their daughters.
- ♦ One Stop Center scheme: to offer easy access for women suffering from domestic abuse or violence, and needing support.
- ♦ Pradhan Mantri Ujjwala Yojana: to offer free LPG connections to women living below poverty line.
- ♦ Mahila Haat: to support women entrepreneurs and women self help groups.
- ♦ Rajiv Gandhi National Crèche Scheme for Children of Working Mothers: meant to provide affordable day-care services to working women.
- ♦ Maternity Benefit Scheme: for pregnant women and lactating mothers.
- ♦ Women's Helpline 1091: to provide emergency assistance to women in trouble, especially those facing violence of any kind.

Beti Bachao, Beti Padhao (2015)

One of the most spectacular initiatives by the Government of India, deals with the upliftment of women by ensuring protection and survival of the girl child in light of the declining Child Sex Ratio. It was launched in January 2015 fulfilling one of the election promises by the current Prime Minister. Even after 70 years of independence, we are still chained to regressive mentality leading to inhuman practice of female infanticide. This scheme focuses on celebrating the birth of a girl child and being proud of them just as we are about our boys. This social campaign creates awareness and encouragement in 100 identified districts with alarmingly low sex ratio by extending Rs.1 crore each.

Sukanya Samridhi Account (2015)

It was launched in January 2015. The government is making efforts not only to save more and more girls but is equally determined to provide them with better and economically secured future. India being a emergency help, medical support and legal and psychological assistance to affected women and girls even below 18 years of age.

Pradhan Mantri Ujjwala Yojana (2016)

Launched in March 2016, this is a step by the Government of India to keep every household fed and aims at providing free LPG connection to women below poverty line. It gained a lot of attention due to the social campaign and an appeal to the affluent class to give up LPG subsidy in favour of weaker classes. Making sure that each family has a LPG connection will have two way advantages. It will not only work for upliftment of women by improving their health, pushing them away from smoke and dust, but also save non-renewable resources used for fire by these people. They only need to submit the required documents and make an application to garner benefit of this scheme.

Mahila E-Haat (2016)

This plan emphasizes on empowering women entrepreneurs, NGOs, self-help groups and small producers. It was introduced in March 2016, this bilingual portal presents an online marketing platform for women all over our country to showcase products manufactured, and the services offered by them to attract customers. This portal shall act as a catalyst for their business and requires only a mobile number to be accessed from anywhere, anytime. A huge leap, it is in line with the 'Digital India' and 'Stand up India' social campaigns to boost the Indian economy.

Maternity Benefit Program (2017)

This scheme is for the benefit of pregnant and lactating women in India and desires to provide proper care, practice and efficient utilization of government sponsored facilities. Previously known as Indira Gandhi Matritva Sahyog Yojana, it was renamed as Pradhan Mantri Matritva Vandana Yojana in 2017 to combat the increasing maternal mortality rate. It presents conditional cash transfer for women of 19 years or above who are expecting or lactating for her first two live children. It additionally covers the wage loss incurred during this period.

Women's Helpline (2015)

It was adopted in April 2015, this Women's Helpline 1091 scheme is an initiative for upliftment of women who are in need of immediate emergency response facing violence. It provides 24 hour toll free telephonic assistance to any women or girl facing violence in the public or private sphere of life. It also spreads awareness about various plans and programs launched and run by the government and governmental agencies for their help. These helplines intervene in critical situations by referring to nearest hospital, ambulance facility, police station, fire department, and others.

Impact of the above mentioned policies:

Government policies had significant impact in bringing transformation in society. In the long run, policies like these will eventually bring changes in the condition of women. Different policies address different needs which is the essence of initiatives like these. As women's concerns include a human and financial resources to ensure gender equality at the local, regional, national and international levels. Programmes related to women's opportunities, potentials and activities should have a dual focus. On one hand, programmes should aim at meeting the basic as well as the specific needs of women for capacity building, organizational development and empowerment. Small enterprises are the best vehicle for stimulating participation of women in the development process. To combat the entire social and gender inequalities, empowerment is seen as very crucial and important.

Since, 1950s onwards, different approaches related to women and social policies were adopted. The approaches shifted from one to another on the basis of their needs. The wider approaches on the basis of which different policies have been adopted are the welfare approach, the range of aspects, it would be more appropriate if the government comes up with more policies. One of the weaknesses of these endeavours is the execution or implementation mechanism. These mechanisms are frequently hampered by unclear mandates, lack of adequate staff, training, data and sufficient resources, and insufficient support from national political leadership.

Conclusion

For the overall social development, it is extremely important to ensure that every individual is economically, socially and politically empowered. Empowerment of women is seen as a constituent as well as an instrument of development. No country can be considered to be developed if half of its population is severely disadvantaged in terms of basic needs, livelihood options, access to knowledge and political voice. The realization of these goals needs to be supported by the allocation of necessary

Women in Development (WID) approach, Gender and Development (GAD) approach and lastly the Empowerment approach. Welfare basically refers to the services oriented towards women, or other poor and vulnerable groups of the society. They mainly have a relief goal. While, empowerment works towards the long term goal in contrast to the welfare one. Empowerment makes them capable of achieving and using the opportunities whenever offered. When empowered they can make the full use of welfare services that have been provided. Therefore, empowerment seems to be the prerequisite for the welfare approach. No path of development can be adopted without dealing with empowerment.

TRANSLATION AS ...

the concept today, as in achieving the same meaning in the target language as in the source language, thus was not a major concern as far as Indian translators were concerned. But there was a different sort of equivalence that translators hoped to achieve, which was in matters of the emotional impact of the text and other matters of style, like rasa, and dhvani. The need for translation has existed since time immemorial and translating important literary works from one language into others has contributed significantly to the development of world culture. Ideas and forms of one culture have constantly moved and got assimilated into other cultures through the works of translators. The history of translation is related to the history of the often invisible cross cultural interactions of the world. Ideas and concepts from the East notably India, China and Iraq have influenced the Western culture since as early as sixth century B.C. when trade ties were first established between India and the Mediterranean countries. Translators have enabled Holy Scriptures like the Bible written in esoteric languages like Latin to be understood by ordinary people by translating them into more common languages without depending on a few elite priests or the members of clergy to explain what they contained.

Role of translator in Global Era

21st century has brought changes as well as challenges for the language industry. With people moving abroad and willing to learn different languages, it has opened new doors for translation industry. Translation and interpretation services has become the fastest growing industry in the United States related to job growth. This 21st century has also brought in numerous machine translation apps that does the job. Due to its limitations, companies prefer human translators. This has increased the demand for professional translators even more than before. Globalization has turned out to be the new era for translation industry. This new era has brought opportunities for every industry. Product industry has seen products being manufactured with lower costs and superior quality. Similarly, translators too have developed competitions around the world especially from low cost countries. Now, there is no more language barrier due to the globalization. Thus, it has resulted in more interactions with people around the world. This cross cultural interactions has increased the demand for more translators and interpreters.

Globalization has increased interactions among people around the world. This has impacted the vocabulary for certain languages. Words have been borrowed from different languages and have been adopted. This foreignising of a language has made work little easier for translation companies. Due to globalization there is more work as there are no country barriers. People from abroad come over and get translation done by Indian companies. This has given more work for companies in India.

There are different dimensions to globalization in terms of translation industry. English was initially restricted to certain countries. Due to globalization, English has benefited the most along with many other languages. Literature has found a wider audience in languages that have been heard of. Writers and readers have got immense opportunity to explore and share. Translation industry will get to touch areas of literature as well. Due to trade barriers small enterprises are pressurized to become global. This has led to increase in advertisements. Translation industry plays a huge role in making them global. They make the companies appear same in different countries keeping in mind the culture and language differences. These global companies are forced to seek the help of translation companies and is becoming the core business of such companies.

As globalization is increasing, need for translation services is also growing. It is expected that globalization is going to affect the translation industry in a more profound manner compared to other industries. Translating industry will be seeing a boom in the recent years. The success of the translation industry is ever growing, and will remain so as it continues to help bridge the communication gaps between clients and business worldwide. Immense opportunities will develop, new clientele base will be set, new languages will be added to the list and much more this industry will experience.

Different Types Of translation:

Translation is a field that is seeing a lot of activity nowadays, thanks to the increasing globalization of businesses. International travel has also increased significantly - for both business and leisure. This means there is, at any given time, a large number of people in a country that don't necessarily speak the local language well. Of course, this augurs well for the translation industry. There are many types of translation that may be required, and each one is unique, with its own process and specific requirements. If you have a business with international operations, it would be beneficial to partner up with an experienced professional, or a translation services company, who is capable of understanding your specific requirements and accommodating them. On your part, it is important that you have a meeting with your service providers to apprise them of your exact needs - the more info you can give them about your business and your target market, the easier it will be for them to provide you with the best service possible. If you can, do try to specify important terms or jargon used in your industry, and a style guide; also provide some training sessions to familiarize them with the products or services you offer.

Translations can be broadly classified into Business related, and Non- Business related. However, some kind of overlap is in both categories. So let us examine the most common types of translations that are performed.

Literary Translation

The name is self-explanatory - literary translation refers to the translation of literary works like stories, novels, poems, and plays. It is often considered the highest form of translation because a literary translation is so much more than the mere conveying of the meaning and context of the document in the source language into the target language. It involves incorporating the appropriate cultural nuances, translating humour, feelings, emotions, and other subtle elements of a particular work. Many litterateurs believe that it is extremely difficult, if not impossible, to translate works of literature - especially poetry. Some examples of situations that could be very difficult are - rhyming words, puns, idioms, anagrams, and so on. Often, there are no appropriate translations in the target language, and the nuance is lost.

Commercial Translation

This is one of the most complex translations, and involves birth certificates and marriage certificate translations, translating contracts, agreements, treaties, memorandums, wills, and so on. A good translator needs to understand the various underlying contexts of the documents and that of the two regions or countries for which the documents are intended - the socio-cultural aspects, and the politico-legal aspects as well. They would then need to translate it in a manner that the target audience easily grasps the text. Even if you are familiar with the cultures and other aspects and are highly skilled at translation, you may need to consult legal professionals so as to ensure that your translation is completely error-free.

Technical Translation

Any technical content that needs to be translated - user guides, manuals, online help text, instruction booklets, training materials and videos, marketing materials for technical fields like manufacturing, science or engineering - all of this comes in the ambit of technical translation. Formatting is an important aspect where the translation of technical content is concerned, as desktop publishing or DTP is required for it. Often the screenshots and even graphics have to be edited to make it suitable for the target language/s.

Judicial Translation

This type of translation is different from legal translation; the latter is about translating legal documents - which could be very old too. But when we talk about judicial translation, we basically refer to the activity of translating court documents like depositions, minutes of meetings, expert testimonies, witness testimonies, judgments, letters rogatory, interviews and more - basically, activities related to cases.

Administrative Translation

In the realm of translation, administrative refers to the translation of management texts we often see being used in organizations - whether huge corporations or regional businesses. Though pretty similar to commercial translations, it is not exactly the same. While administrative translation can be called a subset of commercial translation, all commercial translation is not necessarily administrative.

Medical Translation

Any medical content that is patient related, like labels, packaging, instructions, or software, and content that is product related, like research papers, clinical trial paperwork, quality management certificates and the like, usually needs translation. It is absolutely imperative that the translation service providers are experienced, have the requisite knowledge, and are in-country professionals. Translation of medical documents can also be very tricky as the requirements of translation can differ from country to country; a translator or company specialized in medical documents would be your best bet, as they would be familiar with the intricacies of all the different requirements.

Website Translation

We are of course talking about website copy, subtitles for videos on your web pages, and any documents you have there. Here you will also need to change things like currencies, address formats and layouts, so as to appeal to the different local audiences. You need to think about the languages you want your website to be translated into and localize only those pages which will apply to the target audience. Using a website-translation management system to automate and ease the process if you have frequent updates to your website copy.

Knowledge Translation:

The National Translation Mission, a brain-child of the National Knowledge Commission intends to translate textbooks and classical works in areas like sociology, history, geography, geology, medicine, chemistry, physics, mathematics, linguistics and political science into the Indian languages in order to raise the standard of education done in mother tongues and to render accessible current and cutting-edge knowledge so far available only in English to the rural poor and the backward sections of the society. The Commission is looking for competent translators from English into all the Indian languages and there is evident scarcity in the area.

Media Translation

The print, electronic, visual and auditory media- newspapers, magazines, radio, television, cinema etc- need plenty of translators from one language into another. Many media houses publish papers and journals or run television channels in several languages at the same time and they need quick yet communicative translations of news, serials, film scripts and programmes. Dubbing and subtitling are other areas

Script Translation

Many popular movies and TV shows that come out of Hollywood are dubbed into several languages and released worldwide; sometimes the films are from foreign languages and dubbed into English and other European languages - like the Telugu language blockbuster from India, Baahubali, which was released in Chinese and German, among other languages. The Harry Potter series was also released into dozens of languages. But for these releases to happen, the scripts have to be translated first- and the dialogues. You can say this is a type of literary translation, but it's not exactly the same. It can be very dicey, as translating punchlines, jokes or catchy phrases into another language to make the same impact is very difficult. With more movies being released in multiple languages nowadays, this type of translation is very much in demand today.
